Gelding found an easy spot 2-back and somehow managed to lose that in a field of 4; he hopped at the start last time to lose a length there and then floundered from inside; this is another who has a steady routine and doesn't so often deviate from it; sm all fields have flattered this guy's career record a bit while he did manage to win a race here in May; will limit to minor spots on most tickets.

First dart; Gelding was a winner in first local outing before losing 13 straight and then winning emphatically in latest; speed held quite well in latest and there really wasn't much at all in the field; big Beyer offered although pace was surely a contr ibuting factor to it; today's foes aren't the greatest while this guy isn't especially grand himself; just has his confidence sky high as the season comes to a close.

Hasn't clicked for new outfit yet but does have speed to burn and now drops further in class for the final day; certainly figures in the early scrum but we can't project an easy time of it up there for her; hasn't done anything to improve upon form exhibited in the Arizona maiden ranks and others seem more enticing this time.

Managed a modest maiden win to begin local campaign but has otherwise been a minor player for more than a year; 4yo has known just a single sprint vs. winners to date and may be legged-up a bit after the series of 1 mile tests; wouldn't guess that her routine Beyer range will get her very far vs. the best of these and also guessing that the career-best Beyer 3-back was largely a function of pace; minor role.

Had the preferred outside role in latest speed duel and it paid off as her pace foe chased her all the way and ended up second; latest wasn't that strong of a contest and this miss is already a 4yo so improvement isn't a guarantee anymore; she IS tightly -raced and perhaps a bit more fresh than are many of the toes at the end of the season; still faces a tough task.

First pick; Almost none of the others entered here are proven to be able to run with this gal for the duration of this sort of a contest; wide draw is ideal in that she can stalk from the outside while her rider doesn't need to commit to anything; price cut is as much to avoid having to winter or ship her after the season is over as it is for anything else (such class drops are less telling on closing weekend); she has only raced twice since May of this 3yo season so there remains plenty of improvement potential in this corner. -George Cottrell

Barn woke the echoes from 45 years ago with latest which found this gal hanging on for dear life to win her maiden; pace in latest was such that she'll probably be in deep water this time around and the price hike only compounds the switch from maidens t 2 winners; closing day demands various shots in the dark.

Third pick; Scored at first asking vs. SpWt sorts and now moves in with claiming stock for 2nd try; on the downside it has been more than 6 weeks since debut AND she topped just 4 opponents in that one; just a couple in here have higher last-out figures and those were earned by experienced runners; a 2nd-time starter leaping up this far is far from out of the question.

Second pick; Tried the Washington Oaks 3 weeks ago, perhaps as a means to learn whether she could handle 2 turns; don't think the end result was at all conclusive given the scalding pace (and the leap up from $15K claiming to stakes company); all of the other speed dropped anchor in last one as well; what that race DID do is assure that this one wouldn't be stepping into this realistic spot after not having raced for nearly 2 months; added maturity since she last won and now she finds a group that is r ipe to be had; enough morning activity to fill much of the time since latest win and this one should go okay here.

Fourth pick; Her inner champion finally surfaced... late in 5yo season; it seems she first needed to suppress her inner Amazing Shirlee; career-best Beyer last out (same for the next pair across the line - but they were 3yo's and thus eligible for same); this one is stakes placed so she has faced winners before - in 2023; momentum might carry her a long way here.

CLOSER LOOK: Beat softies 2-back and 4 of the others returned to go 0–0–0 in their next starts; this guy did mildly better in part due to his being in a 5-horse field; moderate early pace on 7/17 probably explains the Beyer boost and now he'll have to start from the rail while attempting to improve as needed; bit role.

This gelding seems to just go through the motions every time while hoping to be in against foes he can run down; worst performance of the summer was when in another barn for one start but 5yo remains in familiar hands and figures to offer another steady effort.

Terrible campaign at Prineville though admittedly he was waaaaaaaaay over his head in last start there; the July 5 runner-up had been here previously earning back-to-back speed figures of 45; not guessing this one will have much success here.

With today's scheduled start he'll cross the threshold of 2026 being one of his longer campaigns; with his history you can't be surprised at the voided claim 2-back and the class drop that solved nothing in latest; runner tends to do some of his better work when fresh (he HAS to...) but he has been 4th and 5th when making 4th starts of the same calendar year; landed in here just to find a spot for which he was eligible on closing day.

Second guess; Goes 2nd-off-a-claim for barn that has had this runner for 2 starts total - 4th in each; barn is 11-for-last-30 when going route to sprint when no layoff is involved; main worry with this one is his tendency to drift a bit too far back when sprinting although he was able to race right on top of a slow pace and earn a win 2 months ago; rider had a chance to get to know this one in latest.

First guess; Runner does have a sprint win THIS year while he won his maiden here going 4.5 furlongs first out in 2023 before placing in a trio of 2yo stakes to follow; the bottom line is that he is 1-for-past-14 at EmD and that success happened when going around 2 turns; drops into a spot on closing day and should be plenty fit.

Fifth guess; Topped a trio of these in latest and the runner-up had no excuse as he'd been clear early on a moderate pace; made it to post just twice in 2025 and just 4 times so far this year so all is not grand with him; gelding is a bit easier to take now that he has conquered EmD but have to wonder if everything must unfold ideally so that he can barely get there.

Fourth guess; This one has done best stuff in small fields and he just might have his hooves full in this 9-horse spread on the final day of the meet; he knew the challenge of duking it out from the inside on 7/31 and then battled eye-to-eye with romping next-out winner Y Vee R last time around; clearly the 7/24 result was bolstered by his clear early lead and it isn't clear that he's fast enough to beat these under typical circumstances; certainly in the mix for a while.

Third guess; ONCE upon a time 3 years ago this guy was able to come from 8 lengths off the lead to win and he can certainly run hooked; small fields have surely done this one some favors in recent times but he can be fairly effective in various scenarios and should sit a great trip from out here; note he was a VET Scratch here in mid-August but he did work a sharp half-mile since then; one of many chances in a grab-bag. -George Cottrell

CLOSER LOOK: That was a sad lot of foes he topped in 7/4 return and the southern Oregon maidens weren't much better one 9/22 of last year; credit this one for showing good speed before dropping anchor in latest, particularly as the one he chased drew away to win by 14; not guessing that to return at same level will afford this one any relief or greater hope; inside draw likely only dooms him further.

He was given a pretty good rating and managed to top a trio of these in latest and runner also deserves some credit for having been within earshot while forcing the early pace; he's just 3 and it is fall so he like others his age just might improve marke dly and suddenly as they mature; he gave good account of himself vs. elders last month and now returns at familiar level for D. McPhee; some of the others are reliably faster but this gelding might make the exotics at a square number.

Second impulse; It was nearly all closers in the local derby so his effort there wasn't as bad as it seemed, even though he was considerably overmatched; the giant Beyer 3-back was largely a function of pace as the top pair ran one-two all the way; the 7/24 affair did produce THREE next-out winners plus a runner-up who was behind one of those; winner of latest was a sharp cookie but the runner-up there is back in here and he'd have to turn the tables on that one to threaten for top honors; have the feeling this runner knows only one way of going and that the colt next door might be faster.

Fourth impulse; Just romped going long vs. maidens as a FIVE-year-old and now makes the switch to winners while also cutting back in distance; envisioning this one settling for a stalking trip from the outside with a good amount of speed just inside of h im; might be a jolt when switching from maidens to winners and he doesn't have the improvement potential of his younger foes; latest Beyer routine in this corner is not going to win this contest so something is gonna have to go his way for best chance.

First impulse; GO to the paddock to see this WHITE HORSE one last time this season - he may even become more vivid as he ages; he represents SIX consecutive generations of white animals in his family tree and he has come around and become more competitiv e since moving into the claiming ranks; his uniqueness dictates that he has long raced with foes that have been markedly faster than he is; once again he finds a spot that may suit him, particularly if he can drop back off of a hot pace and attempt a lat e charge (smaller fields demand that he race near enough to keep tabs on the pace - maybe time to abandon that routine). -George Cottrell

CLOSER LOOK: Lands in a relatively challenging spot as it appears that pace factors contributed to the new-top Beyer earned by this gal last time; even if we treat her as a runner who hit the beam in front in 3 of 28 starts (once DQ'ed) then she still appears a bit w in-shy; only EmD (first place finishes) were in a maiden affair and in a 5-horse field a couple of months ago); can see this one being over-bet relative to her true chances in here.

3-w, late rally

Angled out 2-w, clear

Lacked runner rallied

Split horses, drew off

5-w, full of run

Won like a good thing when leaving the N3L ranks but now lands in a tough spot for final chance at the stand; what this placement DOES do is give her an updated last start so that perhaps she'll be more fit in the event that anything is on the horizon before TuP opens; 6yo hasn't been terrible when going long although lacks a win around 2 turns; may come collecting if the pace is hot and contested.

3-w, lacked rally

Fourth pick; She is 1-4-3 / 15 when going around 2 turns but the win came on the lawn in Arizona; Essex trainee certainly tries her heart out although she is still somehow 0-for-Emerald; knows this level well and seems to fit Beyer-wise; don't think we'd want to be the rider entrusted with attempting to rate/time/underSTAND this gal just right in order to have her there first under the beam; she does have style versatility, which is both a blessing and a curse - if there were just one way, any rider would know what to do; never know whether today might be the day she is finessed just right.

Third pick; Rides a string of 3 straight wins and she is clearly speed when things are going right - THAT helps not only her, but also the rider next door who won't want to land two runners from the same barn in the same speed duel; there ARE other pace chances in here although none seem very potent; sharp miss has every chance to end the season with a 4th straight win.

Second pick; She's been quite consistent all season long and even when trounced in stakes company last out the Princess' still hit her Beyer mark in sound defeat; love her stalking style and Krigger is back aboard for this try while she'll have the cozy draw right outside of the main speed; can tell right away that this contest is likely to become a chess match among riders and in that event it won't be so bad to have Krigger on your side.

Runner remains eligible for Non-winners-of-3-races but she did perk-up when meeting stock similar to this in latest; speed ran 1-2-3 all the way around in last so the steady tempo likely flattered those who were up near to it; this 4yo did win at SA in A pril before changing hands and heading north but we probably need to see another strong effort before getting very excited about her chances.

Was no match for these last time but if you want a small reason to believe in this gal then observe the winner of the 7/4 race in Wyoming and then turn the page to today's 7th race here to find Mr Love Muffin, who the 7/4 winner also topped on 7/18; no doubt it is a stretch to consider, particularly as this one lists a single dirt Beyer above 51; didn't take much action in the tote vs. some of these and didn't justify much of same once the bell sounded; in tough.

First pick; Was patiently handled in early summer and came out and made her effort count upon local return; now trying for 3rd straight EmD score while toting top last-out Beyer and a relative freshness that the others don't all share at this stage of the season; placed with precision once again and should have enough early foot to clear the post and sit a nice trip behind the top flight. -George Cottrell

CLOSER LOOK: First pick; Gelding is about a length from being 5-for-5 at the stand so he has certainly given his all every time and looks to end on a high note for solid barn; 5yo does NOT have top last-out Beyer here but the other was earned with an easy pace scenar io in his favor while this one earns his stripes the hard way; can save ground much of the way and deliver another solid shot to help bring down the curtain on the 2026 season.

Obviously this one is a case of finding whatever spot you're eligible for and giving it a try on closing day; runner DOES have early speed and distance success in his corner but c'mon, he's only finished in the trifecta ONCE from 12 chances career-wise; a foe has 12 WINS and another pair have 9 each; would expect this one to wilt if one of the players keeps him company in the early stages.

Now 13 months since last EmD win and 2 years since the one before that; gelding knows his way around Turf Paradise so the last-out claim fits the bill BUT he's in a considerably tougher spot today and will be fortunate if able to land one of the more meaningful minor prizes here.

Fourth pick; Took limited tote action before losing to some of these 3 weeks ago but he has earned figures that could compete with most of this lot; winner of latest was able to cruise on an easy lead and there probably isn't THAT much pace competition w ith which to keep him honest in here; this one is a steady router who always tends to deliver enough to get at least part.

Here's another who seemingly just threw his hat into any ring where it would fit; he too does have recent 2-turn seasoning and was a winner going a mile here 13 months ago; gonna find these a lot tougher than what he has been facing but the hope is that he can get lucky trip-wise and be in the right place at the right time to collect a decent slice.

Second pick; Four foes were at his mercy 2-back when able to get clear early and then latest found the early pace relatively slow such that he managed to get the 3rd quarter mile in :23.77 and keep going from there; there is no substitute for sharpness a nd runner is in solid hands; 500 hitter locally raced and won for a $5K tag here about 14 months back; seems likely to be over-bet today but could easily win the thing.

Third pick; Ships in sharp from Wyoming where on some occasions he raced well enough to threaten the likes of these; runner is a snug fit with the conditions here as he raced for a $10K tag earlier this year down south; shipped and won here going a mile at first opportunity last year so the fact that he has had success locally in the past really helps his cause; decent style for the company he'll meet today and don't miss the fact that he won stakes with purses of $28K and $37K since last in for $10K claiming; don't sell this one short.

This is a THREE-year-old meeting OLDER foes while still eligible for non-winners-of-2 and lacking a win around 2 turns; of course he remains eligible for improvement at this stage of his development but it would take a great deal of same to menace these; the local Derby was the sort of affair in which SOMEBODY had to run 4th and a quartet of that lot already returned to finish out of the trifecta next time out; better not make any major risks on this guy's chances today.

CLOSER LOOK: Fourth pick; Ending the season with $5000 maiden claimers; inside runner raced once in past year and split the field in that one; winner on 8/23 was notching best-ever Beyer while the runner-up got best in a long while, as a 5yo; at any rate, this 3yo has every right to improve with the race under foot and nobody is pushing the envelope class-wise here; list with the contenders before you look at what else is in here.

Brings zero early foot and figures in the teens along with zero trifecta finishes through 5 starts; he IS a 3yo with improvement potential but can't find a great reason to anticipate it coming toDAY AND being enough to make a major difference here.

He's a SIX-year-old maiden who just matched best-ever finish while netting a Beyer Speed Figure of 24; even that was probably cushioned by a moderate early tempo; another with limited early foot to offer but maybe he can get back to Grants Pass and make a go of it there; in deep water.

Second pick; Sold for a tidy sum as a 2yo and then things didn't work out upon reaching the races for the first time at 3; move here netted improvement and MAYbe she has enough tactical speed to stay within earshot of this lot; filly seems to have a deci ded edge over most if not all of these and many would be happy to successfully bank on a favorite to end mandatory payout day.

Third pick; His latest was rather productive as $5K maiden sellers go - 4 returnees, 2 winners and another who was runner-up to one of those; not sure what to make of the 2-back effort which produced career-best Beyer in first start off the claim; and wh ere are we IF we write-off latest dud to the new front-end try?; and maybe he was just dragged along to a higher figure by the better foes in the 2-back try vs. winners; steady figures in the 30's would warrant a spot in the superfecta in the last danc e. -George Cottrell
